Consultancy services

Estate of Alice Neel: Jeremy Lewison devises the strategy for disseminating knowledge of the work of the American artist Alice Neel including organizing exhibitions, writing about her work, devising and maintaining the Alice Neel website (<http://www.aliceneel.com>), overseeing publications and acting as the link between galleries and the family of the artist.

Kadist Foundation: Jeremy Lewison sits on the advisory board of the Kadist Art Foundation, Paris which acquires works of contemporary art, organizes exhibitions and runs residency programs for artists and curators. He is also a board member of Art Now which oversees Kadist Paris and Kadist San Francisco.

Art Discovery Limited: Jeremy Lewison is building a collection of contemporary art for Art Discovery Limited, a private collection

Bristol Museum and Art Gallery: Jeremy Lewison was the mentor and advisor on a pro bono basis to the initiative of Bristol Museum and Art Gallery in collaboration with Arnolfini to acquire contemporary art, funded by Art Fund International (Collections Fund).

Leeds Art Gallery: In 2007 Jeremy Lewison was charged with devising new displays of the collections of Leeds Art Gallery and to lead the team of curators, conservators and art handlers in the realization of the project.

Responsibilities as Director of Collections, Tate

Acquisitions Programme: Over a period of 18 years Jeremy Lewison was integrally involved in the Tate acquisition program. As Deputy Keeper, from 1990, he led the program of acquisitions of modern and contemporary works of art, devising the strategy and taking the lead role in negotiations. It was in this period that the Tate's emphasis on collecting shifted from pre 1960 to post 1960, although it continued to collect a small number of examples from the earlier period. From 1998, as Director of Collections he devised the strategy and led the program of acquisitions for the entire collection of British art from 1500 to the present day and international art from 1900 to the present. He implemented an expansion of the remit of the collection and began to acquire contemporary art from Latin America and the Far East. Although his role was to take an overview of the entire collection, his own areas of specialism were British art 1900 to the present, American art 1940 to the present and contemporary art in general. He chaired the gallery-wide Acquisitions Group

Corporate Management: He was a member of the Director's Group which was the highest level of management in the gallery. The Director's Group determined Gallery strategy in carrying out the aims of the Trustees. He attended all meetings of the full board of Trustees of the Tate Gallery and advised the Trustees and Director on matters regarding acquisitions and display policies.

Negotiation: He negotiated all the principal acquisitions with vendors seeking the most advantageous prices at all times. He also negotiated with collectors to make gifts or in due course to make bequests to the Tate.

Valuations: His curators valued all works leaving the Tate on loan but all valuations over £100,000 had to be approved by JL. He thus maintained an awareness of market values.

Research Programme: He directed the Tate's Collections research program and devised a new program of collections research moving away from biennial catalogues of acquisitions to a program which researched the collection according to period or school. This led to more meaningful publications and web publication that is sponsorable, adaptable and more commercial without in any way diminishing the quality of output. He established and chaired the gallery-wide Research Group, which discussed research issues across the institution. This group also included two outside academics. He was also a member of the Tate Publishing Review Group which determined the publications Tate Publishing undertook other than exhibition catalogues.

Exhibitions: Over the years he organized a number of exhibitions at Tate. These include solo shows by Terry Winters, Sol LeWitt, Brice Marden, Anish Kapoor, Ben Nicholson, Jackson Pollock and Barnett Newman. He wrote the catalogues or books that accompanied all these exhibitions. Beyond Tate, he was the curator of the Ben Nicholson retrospective that took place at IVAM Centre Julio Gonzalez, Valencia in 2002

Collections Displays: Until 1999 he was responsible for directing the display of the collection, deciding on the themes of the rooms, overseeing the programming of the display changes and the hanging of the galleries. After the establishment of Tate Modern and Tate Britain he was called upon to advise those institutions on their display programs.

Contact with Collectors: He led the Patrons of British Art and Patrons of New Art whose executive committees he attended; he also led the initiatives to establish the Tate Collectors Forum and the American Collectors Forum in 2001. He also had considerable input into the Tate International Council and hosted receptions in New York for the American Fund for the Tate Gallery. He met collectors regularly during the course of his work and was also extremely well networked with museums and commercial galleries internationally.

Public advice: He was the Tate's expert advisor to the Reviewing Committee for the Export of Works of Art. He was a member of the executive committee of the International Committee of Museums of Modern Art (CIMAM) for ten years.

People Management: He managed a division of 35 people of whom 30 were curators and the remainder support staff. In 1998, when the Modern and British Collections were merged, he was the architect of the new divisional structure. The division was divided into teams, along art historical lines. All team leaders reported directly to JL.

Financial Management: He managed the Tate's acquisitions budget consisting of £2m of government funds plus money raised from other sources. Typically the Tate spent about £3-4m per annum on art. He also managed a divisional budget the principal component of which was salaries. This amounted to more than £1m.

Other: He has been a visiting lecturer at a number of universities and museums, was an examiner of the history of art tripos at Cambridge University, and a member of various international juries. In 1997 he was the judge of the Ars Fennica Prize. He has been a member of CRASSH (Cambridge Research into the Arts Social Sciences and Humanities) and a member of the exhibitions committee of the Fitzwilliam Museum.
